
 By the King.

¶ The effect of certaine Letters Patents granted to Adam Newton, Iohn Southcot, and Iohn Wood Esquiers, for the vse of a new Invention of Steeping all kind of Graine, that is to be sown, for the benefit of Husbandry.

Wheras the said Adam Newton, Iohn Southcot and Iohn Wood, haue through their great charge, industry, and experience deuised and inuented a new Invention of Steeping all kinde of graine (that is to be sown) in a certaine liquour compounded of sundry materials of very small value, which euery Husbandman hath, or with little charge may procure: the which Art & Invention hath bene found by many that haue made triall of the same, to be very beneficiall for the increase of Corne and Graine, as well in sparing of Soile, as also in preserving the Seed from birds, fowle and vermine, as by Certificate exhibited vnto His Maiesties Commissioners hath very clearly bene testified: whereupon the Kings most Excellent Maiestie hath bene pleased by his highnesse Letters Patents, sealed with his great Scale of England, to grant vnto the said Adam Newton, Iohn Southcot, and Iohn Wood, and their Deputies and Assignes, the sole vse, exercise and benefit of the said Invention. And His Maiestie hath also thereby straitly prohibited all persons, that none of them doe attempt directly or indirectly, the vsing, or practising of the said Invention of Steeping of Seed corne and Graine, as is aforesaid, without the speciall Licence of the said Patentees, vpon paine of forfeiture thereof, with other penalties expressed in the said Letters Patents.

 Given at Westminster the fift day of Iune 1613. in the xj. yeere of Our Reigne of Great Britaine, France and Ireland.

God saue the King.

Also these are to giue notice and knowledge to all and euery person and persons, that are or shalbe desirous to haue the vse and commoditie of the said Invention, That if they please to resort to the house of there the said Patentees, or some of their Deputies, shall be ready to conferre and agree with any such person or persons, for the licencing, vsing, and instructing them in the said Invention.
